Eight hundred park visitors evacuated

Associated Press

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. — Windblown embers from a 165,000-acre forest fire ignited rooftops Wednesday inside the Old Faithful Geyser complex of Yellowstone National Park, after hundreds of tourists evacuated the area.

At least four buildings were destroyed as the big North Fork moved into the outskirts of the complex Wednesday afternoon when winds shifted, creating a wall of flame that forced 40 firefighters to retreat from the lines.

"When that firestorm went through there, we had to move our people out of there," said Denny Bungarz, fire incident commander. "When you can feel the heat inside your car, it's time to move."

Embers rained down on firefighters who wetted roofs inside the complex and activated a sprinkler line on top of the historic Old Faithful Inn in an effort to protect the building.

Two old cabins, a shack, and a utility shed in the center of the complex were destroyed by the ember-sparked fires as crews on 25 fire engines worked to save other buildings, officials said.

Wednesday's evacuation of the geyser complex was the first in the 116-year history of the oldest U.S. national park, ordered as the fire burned to within a half-mile of the park's most popular attraction.

About 800 visitors calmly left the Inn, which park officials decided to close for the season more than a month early. Later, however, park officials decided to allow day visitors in the area.

Inside the complex, firefighters hosed down buildings to protect them from flames.

Backfires were set in Cooke City, Mont. Wednesday in hopes of slowing the main forest fire that jumped from Yellowstone National Park. Fire officials said that the chances were good that they could save the buildings in Cooke City from burning.

Three of Singer clan

charged with murder

Associated Press

COALVILLE — Three polygamist members were charged with second-degree murder Wednesday in the path of a state corrections officer during a shootout that ended a day standoff.

The charges, filed in 3rd Circuit Court in Summit County, name clan leader Addam Swapp, his brother Nathan Swapp, and John Timothy Singer.

State attorneys had waited to file murder charges in the death of state Department of Corrections Lt. Fred House until after the three men and their matriarch Vickie Singer had been sentenced by a judge following a trial on firearms, attempted murder and bombing charges.

The probable-cause statement accompanying the murder charge was filed at the request of prosecutors.

Attorney General David Wilkinson said it was necessary to protect the state against prejudicial publicity, claiming that defense motions for a change of venue and to close the preliminary hearing would not surprise anyone.

"Obviously, this is a very high-profile case. We wanted to protect ourselves," he said.

Wilkinson said evidence in the case is not strong enough to support first-degree murder charges, nor a murder charge against Mrs. Singer. He said prosecutors would seek, for security reasons, to have the murder charges tried in Salt Lake County.

Summit County Attorney Robert Atkins asked the state attorney general to handle the case because his staff of one full-time deputy and a parttime assistant was inadequate.

Evidence presented during the clan's federal trial showed the bullet which killed House was fired by John Timothy Singer, 22, son of Mrs. Singer, during the shootout at the Singer homestead in Marion Jan. 28. The gun battle seriously wounded Addam Swapp, who triggered the siege when he bombed a nearby Mormon chapel.

House was the police dog handler for an FBI SWAT team that infiltrated a building on the Singer compound the morning of the shootout. When House's dog failed to attack the Swapp brothers on command as they walked outside the clan's log house, gunfire erupted from inside the residence and Jonathan Swapp also began firing, according to testimony. House was struck as he stood in a doorway urging on the dog.

"I believe that in the morning of the shootout that I was protecting my brother-in-law (Addam Swapp) and my brother also. It was a self-defense action," Singer, who is confined to a wheelchair, testified during the trial.

Israeli official continues pursuit for peace

The United States should continue to pursue peace in the Middle East by setting rid of time limits used in earlier proposals and being persistent, said the Israeli Consul General Wednesday.

Eytan Bentsur, who as consul general is the highest Israeli government official in the U.S., responsible for protecting Israeli citizen's interests and fostering economic growth, spoke to a group of BYU students in the David M. Kennedy Center for International Studies. He said, "We (Israel) would like to see the United States be a prime mover toward peace in the Middle East."

The proposal for peace that was put with Secretary of State George Shultz to the Middle East earlier this year was good, he said. "But they tried to extricate the timetable and to use the basic tenets of the plan."

Bentsur also said that the Israelis have been always ready to enter into negotiations with the Palestinians, but that the refusal to discuss the situation comes from their side.

"If the Palestinians want to negotiate privately, we will do so," he said. "Many Palestinians tell us in confidence that if it were not for the strong Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO), they would have negotiated with us sooner."

According to Miles Jacoby, assistant director of the center, Bentsur became interested in BYU a year ago when he came here with an Israeli folk dance group.

Bentsur likes BYU and his coming helps develop stronger ties between BYU and Israel, said Jacoby.

Bentsur will take the position of Deputy Director General for American Affairs in Israel in November at the completion of his stay in the United States.

Bentsur also talked about the 40th anniversary of Israel's struggle for independence.

It is much like that of earlier America, he said. "America is the example which Israel has tried to follow for the past 40 years of its independence."

According to Bentsur, 1948 was the year in which Israel gained its independence, the culmination of a 2000-year dream of the Jewish people.

"We can look back with no small measure of satisfaction on the achievement we've made. The wars and struggles have been tremendous," said Bentsur. Bentsur is one of two consul generals who have visited BYU this week. Jorge Vinuela, Consul General of Argentina spoke to students Tuesday about the diversities of Argentina which are little known to most Americans.

Cosmonaut may be blamed

Associated Press

MOSCOW — The commander of a Soviet space capsule stranded in space for a day may have worsened equipment problems by not taking manual control, the government newspaper suggested Wednesday after the Soyuz TM-5 landed safely.

The government daily Izvestia said reporters questioned deputy flight chief Viktor Blagov of the Soviet space program, on whether the commander, Vladimir Lyakhov, made mistakes Tuesday during attempts to fire braking rockets aboard his Soyuz TM-5 capsule.

The tiny capsule parachuted to a landing at 4:50 a.m. Wednesday, Moscow time, 100 miles southeast of Dzhezkazgan in the Kazakhstan republic of Soviet Central Asia.

Despite a problem with the guidance system, the spacecraft landed within only a few dozen miles of the intended target and only 24 hours late, Izvestia reported.

Television showed the tiny spherical Soyuz capsule floating toward the ground on a white parachute with orange stripes against a reddish dawn sky. A puff of dust rose from the ground when the capsule landed.

Abdul Ahad Mohmand, the first Afghan in space, and Soviet crewmate Lyakhov spent 26 hours aboard the cramped capsule that had enough air for only two days, dwindling food supplies and no toilet.

"Of course it was not an easy thing to sit in spacesuits for 24 hours," Lyakhov, 47, said in an interview near the charged capsule.

The problems began after the capsule undocked early Tuesday from Mir, the space station where Lyakhov and Mohmand spent six days with three other cosmonauts.

After boarding their capsule and undocking from Mir, the cosmonauts made two attempts to reenter the atmosphere on Tuesday.

Izvestia quoted Blagov as giving a philosophical answer to reporters asking whether technical problems or mistakes by mission control or the capsule crew were to blame for the landing delay.

"Life is guilty, a coincidence of circumstances," Blagov said.

Izvestia said Tuesday's first landing attempt was aborted when an infrared sensor used in guiding the spacecraft malfunctioned.

The sensor locked onto the wrong tracking reference point and belatedly started an engine that slows the craft for reentry.

The cosmonauts manually overrode the system and shut down the engine, the newspaper said.

Eytan Bentsur, Israeli Consul General, spoke to a small group of students Wednesday. Bentsur urged the United States to continue its pursuit of peace in the Middle East.

Third District elections to take place on Sept. 13

By ADILSON PARRELLA
Senior Reporter

The third Congressional district Democratic Party primary elections on Sept. 13 will decide who is going to run against Republican incumbent Howard Nielsen for the United States House of Representatives in November.

According to a July 27-28 poll by Dan Jones and Associates, labor organizer Robert Stringham was leading his party opponent, Murray businessman Craig Oliver, by 3 percentage points.

Dallas Campbell, a field operator for the Utah Democratic Party, said 60 to 70 percent of the population in the third Congressional district is concentrated in Salt Lake and Utah Counties. But, there are other counties with small populations which participate very actively in primary voting.

"I feel excellent about the primary ... because of the state convention (where) I defeated Mr. Oliver 57 to 43," said Stringham. "I have gained 23 points in the last two months in catching Congressman Nielson."

Craig Oliver said the poll showed Stringham ahead because the votes had not been broken down to party affiliations. He said "when they (Dan Jones and Associates) broke it down I was ahead by 12 points."

"Jones polls everyone, and they (Republicans and Independents) are not going to vote in the Democratic primary," added Oliver.

Stringham said his strongest point over his opponent is the concern for every individual in the district.

Oliver commented that he has "overworked" Stringham although he says he never thinks about running against him.

He focuses on Nielson.

"I have walked ... to 15,000 doors and I know Bob hasn't done that ... and that is why we are going to win the elections," he added.

Stringham emphasized changing the industrial development bonding situation and creating incentives to attract entrepreneurs.

Stringham said that the opportunity of getting a job in Utah is probably less than 20 percent.

Oliver commented on the importance of education, pointing out that in the last eight years federal funds for education decreased 32 percent.

"For some reason, in the minds of Utah Mormons, the Church has been associated with the Republican Party and that is wrong," Oliver said. "... One party having absolute power ... brings corruption."

Satellites OK despite reported explosion

LOS ANGELES — Four Navy spy satellites headed toward proper orbits despite the reported explosion of a rocket's first stage as it fell away from the rest of the booster during Monday's launch, sources said Tuesday.

The Lompoc Record newspaper, citing observers on the ground, reported Tuesday that the Titan 2's expended first stage apparently blew up after it separated from the second stage of the 103-foot, liquid-fueled rocket, which was seen continuing skyward.

"The satellites are moving exactly as they should be," an Air Force source told The Associated Press, speaking on condition of anonymity. "Everything is just peachy."

A second source, also demanding anonymity, confirmed the satellites were not endangered following the launch from Vandenberg Air Force Base, 140 miles northwest of Los Angeles.

The sources could not confirm that a secondary explosion occurred, but said they wouldn't necessarily be told of such an event if it didn't affect deployment of the satellites.

Spokesmen at Vandenberg and the Pentagon would not discuss if an explosion occurred.

"I checked into it and everything I know is positive," said Capt. Marty Hauser, an Air Force public affairs officer in Washington. "It went well."

Mobs plunder; security shoots looters

RANGOON, Burma — Mobs plundered government offices and warehouses Wednesday, and state radio said security forces shot five looters. Diplomats said chaos was near and prepared to evacuate their families.

Opposition leaders called for a nationwide general strike against 26 years of repressive one-party rule on Thursday. Leaders hoped for the largest of the many mass protests that have driven two governments from office in less than two months.

Looters ranged through the capital, and one Western diplomat said: "The streets are deserted. People are pretty much in fear of their property. Things have pretty much closed down. There is a widespread perception that things have deteriorated."

State-run Rangoon Radio reported looting in 38 areas of the capital Tuesday and Wednesday. It said security forces shot and killed five people, wounded six and arrested 88 looters.

Flood donors want long-term solution

DHAKA, Bangladesh — Three-fourths of Bangladesh was under water Wednesday, and some aid donors say it is time for long-term solutions in an impoverished land that becomes a vast flood plain every monsoon season.

"We have started thinking about the focus of our development aid," a diplomat from one industrial nation said privately.

"It doesn't really make sense to pour millions into this country every year and see it washed away."

Floods began in June with the annual monsoon season. They have claimed 416 lives by the government's count, which is considered low, and 1,267 on the basis of unofficial tabulations by Dhaka newspapers.

The government said Wednesday night all major rivers remained above flood stage but that water levels fell during the previous 24 hours in all rivers except two small tributaries near the Bay of Bengal.

But people still were marooned on rooftops and scarce patches of high ground, and as many as one-quarter of the nation's 110 million citizens were homeless.

General under investigation in scandal

JERUSALEM — A 17th suspect was arrested Wednesday and Israel radio said a general was suspected of involvement in the sale of exemptions from military service, a scandal that has tainted the nearly sacrosanct army.

The latest suspect is a Tel Aviv eye, nose and ear specialist who allegedly sold false medical certificates.

Israel radio said the doctor, Gideon Bialstock, was a Dutch citizen who has lived in Israel on a tourist visa for 20 years.

Some Israelis have paid up to $10,000 for exemptions from compulsory military service.

Later Wednesday, authorities released a lieutenant colonel, one of 16 suspects taken into custody Monday, Israel Television said.

It did not elaborate.

The scandal came to light Monday when military and civilian police arrested 16 Israelis, including high-ranking officers and doctors, after a six-month undercover investigation.

Judge advises legalizing marijuana

WASHINGTON — The Drug Enforcement Administration's chief administrative law judge Tuesday recommended legalizing marijuana as a prescription drug for treatment of multiple sclerosis and nausea suffered by cancer patients in chemotherapy.

The judge, Francis L. Young, found that "marijuana, in its natural form, is one of the safest therapeutically active substances known to man."

"The judge realizes that strong emotions are aroused on both sides of any discussion concerning the use of marijuana," he said in a 68-page set of recommendations and findings.

"Nonetheless it is essential for this agency, and its administrator, calmly and dispassionately to review the evidence of record, correctly to apply the law, and act accordingly."

The recommendation is not binding on the DEA's administrator, John Lawn. Lawn must make a final decision on whether to place marijuana on Schedule II, the list of drugs that can be given to patients with a doctor's prescription.

Quote of the day:

"Famous remarks are seldom quoted correctly."

— Simeon Strunsky

Xiaoping endorses Bush for President

BELJING — China's senior leader Deng Xiaoping surprised U.S. officials Wednesday by saying he hoped Vice President George Bush would be the next president of the United States.

The apparent endorsement of Bush, who headed the U.S. liaison office in Beijing in 1974-75, came during a meeting with U.S. Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci.

"Vice President Bush used to be (current U.S. Ambassador Winston) Lord's predecessor so we had a lot of contact with him at the time. I hope he'll win the election," Deng, 84, said in opening remarks.

Deng, Carlucci and others in the room laughed at the remark.

Carlucci did not comment on the Chinese leader's preference for the Republican nominee over Democratic Gov. Michael Dukakis of Massachusetts.

China's official media files occasional reports on the presidential campaign.

It has has not taken sides nor commented on how the outcome might affect China.

Bush confuses date of Pearl Harbor Day

LOUISVILLE, Ky — Republican presidential nominee George Bush Wednesday confused the anniversary of Pearl Harbor Day as he delivered a tough defense speech to a national American Legion convention.

In his talk to about 7,000 members of the nation's largest veterans' organization, the vice president also said a Democratic administration would leave the nation "hostage to Soviet ballistic missiles."

But murmurs spread through the audience as Bush said, "I wonder how many Americans remember that today is Pearl Harbor Day; 47 years ago to this very day we were hit and hit and hit hard at Pearl Harbor. And we were not ready."

However, a few minutes into his speech Bush paused abruptly and said, "Did I say Sept. 7? Strike that. Dec. 7, 1941," Bush, a World War II Navy pilot, added, "I'm glad I corrected that, I saw this guy shaking me off out here."

Bush's correction on the date of the Japanese invasion of the Hawaiian naval base that triggered the start of World War II won a good-natured round of applause and laughter from his audience.

Shelia Tate, Bush's press secretary, said: "It was 47 years ago this year and he just said today. He wasn't thinking."

The Pearl Harbor remark did not appear in a prepared text of the vice president's speech.

'I'm older and wiser,' says Lloyd Bentsen

WASHINGTON — Three weeks after the Korean War began in 1950, Republican Lloyd Bentsen urged President Truman to threaten a U.S. atomic attack on "principal North Korean cities" if invading forces did not withdraw from South Korea.

As a freshman congressman in 1950, Bentsen, a 1988 Democratic vice presidential candidate, was among the first Washington figures to advocate the use of nuclear weapons in Korea. Neither President Truman nor, later, President Eisenhower ever agreed.

In an interview Tuesday, Bentsen said he is "older and wiser" now and would not do the same again.

15 traffic will slow BYU fans

FRAVIS MCBETH
Verse Staff Writer

BYU football fans who plan to travel to Thursday's game via I-15 will face 40-50 minute delays due to traffic caused by ongoing construction near Point of the Mountain, according to the State Department of Transportation. However, Kevin Beckstrom, public information officer for the department, said there are several options available for those who wish to avoid the projected traffic problems. "Redwood Road is probably the best alternate route," Beckstrom said. "Just travel south on Redwood Road to Highway 73 which will take you through Lehi and back to I-15, bypassing the congested area." Another possible alternative, according to Beckstrom, is to travel on the state frontage road at the Point of the Mountain and return to I-15 south of the construction area. However, the frontage road may be as heavily traveled as I-15 and thus may not be the best of the alternate routes," said Beckstrom.

Financial luncheon is today

ELONA J. WOODWARD
Verse Staff Writer

A community group representing women in the financial field will host a luncheon today featuring Elaine Weiss, former Utah Banking Commissioner, who will address the topic of how banks deal with failing thrifts and loans. The National Association of Financial Women (NABW) has the largest individual membership of women financial executives in the country. With more than 30,000 members nationwide, NABW directs its activities toward enhancing the professional standing of women in finance. The luncheon will be held at the Provo Excelsior Hotel at noon and is open to all who are interested. Utah County presently has 30 active members who meet bi-monthly to participate in various training sessions that will further us in our profession," said area chapter president, Evelyn Douglas.

NABW is not currently involved with students in finance. "Our group is mainly directed to professional executives and the career growth of women in the financial industry," said Douglas. Each year a new management plan is adopted by each chapter, which focuses on helping members improve career skills. "We are also involved with community service, such as the KBYU telethon, various other fundraisers and sponsoring scholarships," said Douglas. "We want to be able to have the funds available to give so that a girl in the community can apply it towards her education," she added. According to Douglas, "NABW has recently become more recognized because we are more vocal and active. We hope to eventually develop a scholarship fund to aid women studying finance." According to Douglas, "Elaine Weiss will be telling a story that is pertinent to the financial field."

Beckstrom added that due to the unpredictable nature of the traffic situation, the best option would be to leave sufficiently early and to plan for a delay. The traffic problem on I-15, however, may seem to be a lesser worry once BYU fans reach the stadium and attempt to find a parking place. According to Mike Harroun of the University Police Traffic Division, there are quite a few good places for fans to park, especially if they get there early enough. Harroun said, "The best place to park if you are coming in from I-15 is at the intramural field just west of University Avenue." Harroun said other good spots might be the Marriott Center parking lot, the lot east of the Administration Building and the lot west of the Smith Fieldhouse. Harroun added that all of the university parking lots will be open to the public during the game. However, the parking lots adjacent to the stadium will be closed to the public, continued Harroun. Harroun said, "I encourage people to park a little farther away and to walk to and from the car. This may seem to take more time but in the long run, fans will avoid much of the traffic and will leave Provo with their sanity."

Orem City Council passes resolution to double salaries

By DOUG GIBSON
City Editor

The Orem City Council voted unanimously to double their monthly salaries and to raise the monthly salary of Mayor Blaine Willis by $200. Mayor Willis, who abstained from the vote, has decided to reject his compensation increase, citing "personal reasons." He did not elaborate further on the subject. The new agreement stipulates that council members will now receive $700 monthly compensation. Mayor Willis would have received $1100. Before the new resolution was passed, council members were paid $350 monthly compensation. Willis receives $900 monthly compensation. The resolution to raise the salaries of council members, approved Tuesday night, includes a requirement that a committee of three citizens-at-large meet twice a year to review compensation for elected Orem officials. According to the Orem City Manager's office, the last time the Council received a raise was in 1974. Council members defended the raise as necessary in order for them to continue to sacrifice for public service. Council member Paul Washbourne told the Daily Herald, "The salary in Orem is so low that the council members have to subsidize their service from their own experience." Washbourne conceded that the issue of a pay raise for city council members is not an issue known for its political popularity. But he also maintained that council members should not be required to subsidize for the privilege of serving in Orem's city government.

Forcing homeless not the answer

The plight of the homeless in America has become a big concern among law enforcement officials, government leaders and compassionate citizens. While many of the homeless are classic "bums," some are also abandoned wives, others are disadvantaged individuals and there are also some young families whose financial situations took a turn for the very worst.

It is obvious we need to do something about it, but a recent lawsuit by the state of Michigan advocating for the homeless and a restraining order issued by a district judge in the District of Columbia are not wise solutions, nor all-encompassing answers to the problem.

The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development has been taking homes repossessed from the bank and selling them in a public auction. The houses, first offered through the bank with backing by HUD, now belong to the government. By selling them, HUD will at least make back what they lost.

In Utah this amounts to about 200 homes a month, all sold through real estate agencies. The agencies were making money, about 6 percent of the list price of the house. The average price for these homes was $43,000. The newspapers were also making money — HUD was spending about $100,000 each month in advertising the homes for sale. The economy was benefited, people who otherwise could not have afforded to own were suddenly homeowners and, since HUD was recouping losses, the national debt was being reduced. It was a win-win situation.

But this was halted last week by the Michigan group who want to make these HUD homes available to the homeless. While this may seem like a solution for the homeless, it may only be forcing people where they do not want to go. By putting the homeless in these houses, the government's money is lost, real estate agencies lose profits and perhaps most importantly, it deprives these people of making good on the American dream.

By just giving these houses to the homeless, they are accepting charity and don't even have the chance to make themselves feel better. And maybe they don't even want the house. Some homeless are out there because they want to be. They need a helping hand, but don't need someone to stick them in a house in the middle of suburbia and be told to mow the lawn, fix the roof and leap back into middle-class lifestyles, which they may be fleeing in the first place.

New York law officials tried forcing the homeless off the streets, making it a law that they find shelter. Forcing people into something is not the answer, particularly when it is at such a cost to the rest of Americans, many of whom are doing the right things, working hard and contributing to society, yet still cannot afford their own house.

There are many shelters with food, clothing and a place to sleep if someone wants it. No one likes to see the homeless loitering on the streets, but they basically have the right to be there if that is what they want. For the many other homeless, who would like to be off the streets, we should extend assistance and concern to help them rebuild. But this is not yet a socialized society in which the rights of the successful are overridden in deference to the needs of the unsuccessful.

Forcing these people into HUD homes is destroying an American privilege.

Information on racists should be publicized

Zeric Smith is a senior from Rochester, N.Y., majoring in political science. He is a co-chairman for the Western Foundation for Racial Equality.

I read with interest your Thursday, Sept. 1 "Universe Opinion," dealing with media silence and racism. I would like to point out what I perceived to be a major logical fallacy in your editorial. You reviewed the events of last fall and winter when Richard (misidentified by you as Ernie?) Butler announced plans to expand his racial and religious bigotry to Utah. These plans were met with the resistance of almost the entire Utah community, including statements of opposition to racism from The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, the governor, the Utah State Legislature, the Utah AFL-CIO, the Catholic Diocese of Salt Lake, ASBYU and ASUU Student Body Presidents, the mayors of Salt Lake, Provo and Ogden, editorials from KSL-TV and every major paper in the state, including The Daily Universe, along with literally hundreds of other community groups. You then concluded that since Butler was un-all non-whites from America? Why have you identified yourself with the Christian Identity Movement which has formally declared war on the U.S. Government? Unless these questions are brought out publicly, the image of harmless eccentricity could mask the violence which has always followed religious and racial intolerance.

As for the "disturbing results" of increased membership, the claim is from the same source that brought us the illuminating ideas that Jesus died only for the white race, America was founded by God only for whites, and that all those who are not white should go back to their respective countries of origin. (Tell that to Sitting Bull.) In addition, Butler's claim is in direct conflict with the most recent estimates of both the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith and the Justice Department.

Having said this, there is validity to the question of how much publicity is too much. There can be no question that ignoring the problem in Coeur d'Alene resulted not in the "curbing" of "recruitment efforts" which you hypothesize, but rather in bombings, robberies and increased racial and religious harassment. These have added that area with a negative national reputation that it continues, with marked success, to battle today. At the same time, of course, it would be foolish to rally on a weekly basis and gain excess media attention for McCarthy.

With this in mind, the Western Foundation for Racial Equality is currently turning attention toward proactive means of dealing with racism in this area.

Some of these activities include pursuing legislation similar to that in Idaho and other states which gives severe penalties to those convicted of crimes motivated by racial or religious intolerance, a strict control of paramilitary training and the complete recognition of the Martin Luther King, Jr. holiday.

We are also beginning work with the State Department of Education and local school districts to implement curriculum changes which will emphasize the gains of the American civil rights movement and the inherent equality of mankind.

We will continue to monitor the activities of McCarthy and any other who abuse the concept of equality which the people in this state have so strongly supported. And finally, the Foundation also serves as a tax-exempt fund-raising organization to promote racial equality and religious tolerance in our state.

I would like to urge anyone who is concerned about the problems of racism here to contact the Foundation locally at 377-5057 or send correspondence to W.F.R.E. 2144 Highland Dr. Salt Lake City, Utah, 84106. Thank you.

Patella problem

Dear Editor:

I hate the thought of the university requiring more G.E. classes, but I'm afraid there's a need for it — at least for a part of the student body. Some students, (they all seem to be female, yet not all of the females) are unable to identify the top of their patella (kneecap) when it comes to determining modest dress length as outlined by Standards. Perhaps the addition of an anatomy class to the G.E. requirement would be beneficial.

Amazed and confused

Dear Editor:

I was absolutely amazed to learn that Provo City is planning to build a trailer park in South Fork Canyon — and thus spend hundreds of thousands of dollars to pollute its own watershed and drive private citizens out of business.

It is doing this in a year when we in Utah, it seems, can't afford to pay even for our children's education and are proposing tax initiatives to cut back on government spending. It is doing so even though it already has two campgrounds in the canyon that are perfectly suited to the kind of use appropriate to a wilderness watershed area.

After seeing various newspaper articles about the proposed trail up South Fork and over in Rock Canyon (great idea!) and improved campsites at Big Springs (also good!), I noticed the half-buried announcement that there also will be a 47-unit trailer park built in the canyon, right over the Provo City water line. I was stunned to learn that it will not only cost $100,000 but will require constant maintenance and a full-time attendant (perhaps another $50,000 a year), and I have learned at least another $100,000 will be needed to upgrade and widen the road to accommodate trailers. And all this is only the "first phase!"

At the same time three trailer parks in Provo Canyon, which cost the public nothing, are barely surviving (over 150 units; average occupancy, about 50) and will likely go under with this competition of extra spaces and the slightly lower fee of $7.

As for the impact on the watershed, Mayor Jenkins must be a city boy who never camped out if he thinks hundreds of boy scouts and group parties will all dutifully use his "stainless steel self-contained units for restrooms" and not the bushes right over the culinary line.

Considering all this, I cannot for the life of me think of one sensible reason Provo is planning such a waste of money with unneeded facilities right on its watershed — with the destructive consequences for culinary water and private enterprise. That is, unless some city official has a relative in the trailer park business. It's hard to believe that of our conscientious public servants, so I can only hope they will come up with even one good reason for such destructive waste — or have the sense to stop it!

Measuring up

Dear Editor:

As a life-long Democrat and Massachusetts resident, I was surprised to read a recent letter in your paper in which Paul Wake described Michael Dukakis as "competent" and "honest." I am curious about the yardstick being used to measure the Little Duke's record.

"Competent?" If not for the Reagan defense buildup (which has yielded the first negotiated reduction in nuclear weapons) coupled with the longest peacetime economic expansion, the Massachusetts economy would be on the skids. The largest employer in the Commonwealth (apart from the bloated state bureaucracy) is Raytheon — a defense contractor. Dukakis has added $4 billion to the state's liability for government pensions (the worst performance in the nation) and is driving up electricity prices and causing brownouts by stymying efforts to make evacuation plans for the Seabrook power plant — these irresponsible actions will be Dukakis' long-term economic legacies.

"Honest?" Dukakis' campaigns have left a trail of candidates who have been done in by backstabbing (Joe Biden) and smear campaigns (Ed King and Joyce Hampers.) Longtime Dukakis friends made a fortune in a suspicious deal involving a new prison site in New Braintree. As a state legislator, Dukakis submitted a bill which would have legalized unnatural sexual acts, yet at the Democratic Convention, he said that he is "for traditional values" (in the tradition of Sodom?) Still, Dukakis' greatest dishonesty is the platform which he is running on: a platform composed almost entirely of platitudes and lacking any concrete form, thus leaving voters to wonder what he would do if elected president. It's clear why Dukakis has said that the issue of this election is not ideology; if ideology were the issue, the Little Duke would lose, plain and simple.

Bush will choose conservative judges

The presidential race between George Bush and Michael Dukakis is regarded by many as being the dullest contest since Eisenhower defeated Stevenson in 1952. The old joke that the race is between "tweedle dum" and "tweedle dee" is resurfacing among political circles.

The reasoning many use is that since America is not at war and generally of a stable environment politically and economically, the candidates are unable to exploit an issue and rouse voter sentiment or emotion. Bush in particular is plagued by a lack of conservative enthusiasm for his candidacy.

The reaction among the right wing of the GOP seems to be "well, if we have to vote for you, we'll do it, but don't expect us to tire ourselves campaigning."

The reality is that whether the conservative agenda continues to prosper in the 1990s depends directly on the results of the November presidential election.

Currently the Supreme Court, due to the current administration which has been able to appoint new justices the past eight years, contains five conservatives as compared to four that tend to vote with an ear to the left.

It wasn't always this way: In the 1960s and 70s the court took a definite leftward tilt and forced an unlegislated liberal agenda upon the American people.

Nobody voted for forced busing. Nobody voted to ban prayer or the Ten Commandments from public schools. Nobody voted to legalize pornography or abortion. Nobody voted to abolish the death sentence or impose "affirmative action."

These measures were decided by a court which enacted laws in a dictatorial mode. Past decisions catered to far left groups like the American Civil Liberties Union. Deeply offended were the majority of Americans who never approved such action in the first place.

Three of our Supreme Court justices are over 80 years of age. One is over 70 years of age. The three over 80 were instrumental in shaping the radical decisions of the 60s and 70s. Either Dukakis or Bush, depending on who is elected President in November, will have the opportunity to define the court for the next few decades.

Although George Bush is admittedly not the dream candidate of conservatives, it can reasonably be assured that he will nominate future justices who share conservative beliefs. Justices who will overrule previous court decisions such as denying life to a potential infant and let the states decide the issue.

He will appoint justices who don't perceive school prayer, nativity scenes or church day care centers as unconstitutional. Justices who will concern themselves only with the most pressing of individual liberties and avoid superseding duly elected legislators.

Michael Dukakis, by his own admission, is a member of the ACLU. As a Massachusetts state senator in the early 1970s, he introduced bills to end state laws against blasphemy, sodomy, abortion and bestiality. As governor in the late 1970s, he vetoed a bill that would require Massachusetts teachers to lead their students in the pledge of allegiance. No court decision motivated Dukakis to support such stances. His own convictions motivated his actions.

The Democratic Party platform is conspicuous in the fact that it scrupulously avoids the word liberal. However, liberal congressman Peter Kostmayer defined the future Dukakis agenda when he counseled radical leaders in Atlanta.

"Just shut up gays, women, environmentalists. Just shut up. You'll get everything you want after the election. But just for the meantime shut up so that we can win," said Kostmayer.

College athletes deserve to be paid for efforts

As the 1988 college football season kicks off its schedule, it is an opportunity to discuss whether or not the players involved should be paid for their efforts.

Many of those involved in the discussion of this issue claim that the players receive enough compensation from the "benefits" that they receive: their college tuition, room and board, etc. But this compensation is not even near enough reward for the player's efforts. In fact, many players are walk-on members of their teams, playing without a scholarship.

In a recently published book by Brian Bosworth called "Confessions of a Modern Anti-hero," the ex-Oklahoma linebacker discusses this issue in detail and takes a stand that administrators and the NCCA should seriously consider.

At many universities in this country where a respectable football team plays, the greatest moneymaker at that school is probably the football team. And under the present system, the profit minus the overhead supposedly goes to the school itself. It usually does. In the players' benefit, rightfully, in some cases coaches manage to put some of the profit back in the players' pockets under the table. Although against NCAA rules, this practice cannot be condemned because the players deserve all they can manage.

Now if a school does not make money on its football program, those players deserve nothing. They chose to attend that school. But at the majority of schools in this country, football brings in thousands of dollars.

Let's take, for example, BYU. Cougar Stadium gets over 60,000 fans attending each game. At an average of $9 per ticket, that's over $500,000 brought in at the gate per game. Now concession sales blow away the gate intake when you consider that you fork out over a buck for each drink or hot dog.

Let's go over the line and say that half the cash intake at the game goes to overhead. That leaves close to $500,000 that the college pockets after every game. Now consider that BYU is one of the cheapest places in the country to watch a football game. Most other schools take in more.

Is that fair? Not a chance. The players are being used. Or as Bosworth puts it, they're being prostituted.

Now I'm a college student and one of the last persons you would expect to defend a free ride. But I thoroughly enjoy college football and feel the money I pay to attend the games should go to those I go to see play.

When we attend a play, where does the money go? Yes, in college, it again goes to the school. But in a professional play, the money goes to the professional actors.

Professional football players are paid. Shouldn't the college players, who provide as much entertainment and injure themselves as often, be paid? Definitely.

Hopefully, under the table handouts will continue. According to Bosworth, many players still receive just compensation. Unfortunately, though, from the wrong sources.

Bosworth claims he earned $100 dollars a day to watch an oil well go up and down. Hey, that's great — he deserved it. Unfortunately, it wasn't the University of Oklahoma that paid him.

Now, if the university were to pay Bosworth for what he did to boost the university and the city of Norman, Okla., on the football field, the alumnus that paid Bosworth could have donated the cash to a more worthwhile cause: The University of Oklahoma.

The NCAA needs to open its eyes. College football players act like professionals and are watched as if they were professionals. The cash flow from college needs to be diverted into the hands of the participants.

College football players deserve compensation.

Professor researches pure electron plasma

by ELIZA TANNER
Universe Staff Writer

A BYU physics professor is conducting experimental research into the nature and confinement of gases composed solely of electrons, or pure electron plasmas.

According to Grant Hart, approximately 99 percent of the universe is composed of plasmas. Familiar plasmas include lightning and fluorescent lights, Hart said. Plasmas are an integral part of thermonuclear fusion reactions and are vital to the knowledge of and production of energy.

A plasma is a high-temperature ionized gas composed of electrons and ions, or electrically charged particles, in such a way that the whole is electrically neutral.

The greatest difficulty with plasmas is that they escape easily. Hart likened confining a plasma to holding a "blob of Jell-O with stretched rubber bands."

Ross Spencer, another BYU physics professor, handles the theoretical end of Hart's research. Spencer is interested in making a plasma in the "simplest way possible and seeing how it works."

Together the two professors attempt to reconcile Spencer's explanations and Hart's experimental results. "The laws of electricity and magnetism are well known but it is much more complicated to actually solve them," Hart said.

Pure electron plasmas are composed only of electrons and have very strong confinement properties. The study of these plasmas enables scientists to understand why plasmas diffuse as rapidly as they do.

Hart designed and helped build the system he currently uses to study pure plasmas. With a shortage of research funds at BYU, old equipment is "cannibalized to create new machines," he said.

A pure electron plasma is created as the electrons are "boiled off" a heated filament. The temperature in the machine ranges between minus 455 degrees Fahrenheit to more than 52,200 Fahrenheit.

Although the temperature range is extreme, little energy is released. During an experiment, the machine may produce less energy than it takes to run a digital watch.

Animal science department names Johnston chairman

Universe Services

N. Paul Johnston of Orem has been named chairman of the BYU Department of Animal Science.

He replaces Max V. Wallentine, who continues as director of the BYU Agriculture Station in Spanish Fork.

Johnston publishes research regularly and has spoken at several international symposia.

As a Fulbright grant recipient, he worked during the 1986-87 school year at the University of Chimborazo in Ecuador.

He has concentrated his studies on the nutrition and reproductive physiology of monogastric animals (those with one stomach).

He also has cooperated with the Ezra Taft Benson Agriculture and Food Institute in teaching third-world families how to economically raise small animals for home consumption.

In 1985, the College of Biology and Agriculture awarded him the College Creative Achievement Award.

After receiving an undergraduate degree at BYU, Johnston completed an MBA at the University of Utah.

He earned a master's degree in reproductive physiology and a doctorate in nutrition at Oregon State University.

Students rally for peace

By ALISA Y. KIM
Universe Staff Writer

The BYU club Response could be described as a group of people who wear red bandanas, tie-dyed shirts, jeans and peace insignias. They often gather to discuss nuclear arms and apartheid, or to say a prayer at the Prayer Vigil for Peace, Thursdays at 11:15 a.m. by the bulletin board between the Ernest L. Wilkinson Center and the Harold B. Lee Library.

Response, which includes BYU students and members of the community, advocates peace and human rights.

"Some people stop and listen, but most stick their noses in the air and walk by," said Alana Kimbel, a junior from Annandale, Va., majoring in secondary education. The style of the group may attract or disgust onlookers, but students need to look past the clothes worn by the participants, said Jenny Mauro, a sophomore from Stockton, Calif., majoring in communications.

After attending a Response meeting, Mauro described the club as an organization with the goal to educate themselves, the BYU student body and the community about human rights. "The 90 members bring attention to peace and philosophical issues through discussions and symposiums. They are also involved in activities such as Pancakes for Peace, the weekly prayer vigils, and demonstrations such as protests against nuclear arms in Nevada."

"It tends to be a less conservative group," Kimbel said. "A broad scope of views are represented by the people there. We don't all agree on abortion, for example."

Although students are generally respect or tolerate for citizens exercising their right to demonstrate, some students believe such actions fail to make an impact on society. "I don't think they make much difference in bringing peace to the whole world," said Lauri Wadsworth, a junior from Concord, Calif., with an undeclared major. "It (such action) brings people together with a good purpose, but if they really want to make a big difference, Christ said to help your neighbor, not to demonstrate in mass."

"Socially, I have trouble with (Response), but for the public they are good," said Nancy Chiu, a senior majoring in microbiology from Falls Church, Va. "To me, they're just as exclusive as social clubs, but it's not bad. I don't think we should eradicate them."

Wadsworth said he would have more admiration for people involved in community programs or helping the next door neighbor.

Kimbel, on the other hand, said that group demonstrations and activities have helped her personally. She said they increased her political awareness, helped her gain a greater understanding of other people's perspectives, and influenced her commitment to human rights on a personal and worldwide level. "Obviously the purpose of our club is not to establish world peace," said Colin Austin, president of Response and a senior from Fredonia, N.Y., majoring in philosophy. "We're not going to be able to solve the problems in Nicaragua."

The purpose of the club is to educate, so that in the future responsible judgment can be made regarding current issues, said Austin. Last year, Response sent supplies to Nicaragua and raised money for Ethiopia.

The efforts of the group may seem small, but at least it's an effort, said Austin. According to clubmember Mark Hannig, a sophomore from Provo majoring in philosophy, Response increased community and government awareness this past semester and resulted in foiling the plans of a white supremacist group called the Aryan Nations.

Dwight McCarthy, the leader of the Aryan Nations, paid for a radio talk show Saturday mornings hoping to spread white supremacy and open a Utah chapter, said Austin.

Response members sponsored a petition which recognized McCarthy's right to free speech, but encouraged advertisers and the radio station not to support the group. Soon other groups became involved.

Fall fashions going floral

Retailers say classic, sophisticated look returns

By JAYNE PETERSEN
Universe Staff Writer

Some retailers agree that this season's line of women's clothing is soft, feminine and classic.

The feminine look with its floral prints carries on from spring into this year's fall fashions, said Lisa Ross, spokeswoman a California clothing firm.

Also popular this season is the classic, sophisticated look.

Susan Collins, fashion director for a clothing department, said, "The trend in fashion is moving toward the traditional, elegant customer. The polished look is being stressed, while the trendy look is on its way out."

A good example of this classic look is influenced by Italian designer, Giorgio Armani. He has designed a feminine suit which has a soft-styled jacket, a wider-legged, draped pant and a soft, full skirt, said Collins.

Sandra Baxter, manager of a local clothing store agrees this season emphasizes the classic look. She said it is much more practical for today's woman because this new look does not go out of style as quickly as the trendy styles of the past.

The traditional cut and style of women's clothing is combined with bright colors, including deep purples, vivid greens and fuchsias. Julie Mathews, ready-to-wear buyer for a major department store, and Martha Wagstaff, area sales manager for another leading department store in Salt Lake City, both agree that women will see skirts, blouses, jackets, pants and winter wool coats all in brilliant color schemes. These bright colors will be combined with classic black.

Part of this classic look includes the Ivy League division. Plaids are popping up on pants, skirts, walking shorts and tops. Wagstaff adds that even the accessories, such as earrings and pins, are no longer gold-plated but rather cloth.

Finally, to finish off any classic outfit, the right accessories are necessary to give it that harmonious "put together" look. The key accessory for this fall is the scarf. According to Baxter, "Scarves have never gone out of style and this year they are in style more than ever before."

Men's fashions look casual

By JAYNE PETERSEN
Universe Staff Writer

The concentrated area of men's fashion this fall is the new casual collection of sportswear.

The all-American sportswear look is mixed and layered with an emphasis on deep color worn with neutrals and leather. According to GQ magazine, "America has been making quite an art of informal clothes in recent years and especially this autumn. The elements are familiar — leather, plaid, khaki, denim — but the makeup is different. A leather duffel coat with a quilted lining. Likewise a plaid shirt (and no tie) worn with a double-breasted suit." The buttoned-up, no-tie look in rich neutral colors and bright plaid shirts worn tieless seems to be popular this year.

The manager of a men's retail store in Orem agrees that colors this season are neutral tones including khaki, forest green and coffee. "The brighter colors have come and gone," said Dale Christofferson, the store's part-owner.

The casual "sporty" look is carried over from last season. The aviator style and darker denim fabrics are combined with new detailing and styling, such as denim accented with purple and green overdyed pockets and patches. "The winning ticket this fall for a young man's wardrobe is a combination of aviator-influenced sportswear, textured and patterned sweaters and slacks for dress, along with denim jackets and jeans," said Randy Ronning, fashion director of the men's division of a national department store chain.

"Campus men are also placing a great deal of stock in classic woven shirtings, particularly plaids and stripes, but these patterns have been executed in new colorations and combined with an exceptionally strong group of fancy sweaters for a fresh, forward look," according to a spokesman for a major department store.

Soft, short precision cuts characterize fall hair styles

By JENNIFER TURNER
Universe staff writer

Trends show it's good-bye to spiky, messy hairstyles and hello to soft, short precision hair cuts.

According to local hair professionals and a recent press release from a national hair styling salon, the 1988 fall trend for hair is a softer, more natural look.

For women the new look will include a simple, shorter hairstyle which creates a more feminine look, Colette Wagstaff, a beautician, said.

"The most requested hair style has been really short with a short neckline in the back," she said.

A hair salon in Salt Lake City is one of 750 salons internationally that predict the return of precision cutting instead of the exaggerated hairstyles of the past few years.

Gordon Nelson, director of style training for the salon said, "The new trend is to have a natural look which is unintentional in appearance."

Nelson said that by texturizing the hair, the effect will be more soft and feminine.

Lisa Riches, a beautician for a local hair salon, said texturizing is a form of cutting in which long strands of hair are cut to shorter strands creating a more bouncy look.

The shorter hair cuts will include long hair in the crown area with shorter precise cuts on the side. Longer hair will be layered with shorter underbangs to create the softer look.

Soft spiral perms using different size rods will add a softer, more gentle look.

Janice Wells, a salon coordinator for a local salon said "One length spiral perms are another favorite of many clients."

"Although we do a lot of short texturized cuts many clients like the big perms to create a more fluffy look," she said.

"Perms will remain a key element in hair fashions, but new perm techniques will allow the hair to be free flowing without being frizzy, too curly or overly structured," said Patty Morgan, a manager of a hair salon.

Color conversion controversy continues

By JENNIFER TURNER
Universe Staff Writer
and the Associated Press

The ongoing fight to preserve old black-and-white films and television shows from color conversion is still a heated issue for filmmakers, who say that color enhancing is a mutilation of works of art.

Last year cable TV owner Ted Turner outraged directors when he released color-enhanced films such as "The Maltese Falcon" and "Casablanca" from his MGM library. "I own it, I'll do whatever I want," Turner said.

The belief by filmmakers is that the process of coloring perverts their original version.

Charles Metton, professor of theatre and film at BYU, feels that by taking a classic black-and-white film and converting it into color, the true intent of the film is not portrayed, but what results is "a cheap remake that looks phony."

Charles Warn, spokesman for the Directors Guild of America said, "What Ted Turner has done single-handedly through his arrogant attempt to disfigure our film heritage is create the largest artist movement in history."

A new government-appointed national film commission with powers over color enhancing was pushed by the guild through federal legislation after hearing an emotional plea from Jimmy Stewart.

Warn says the U.S. Senate is expected to approve the proposal in September and President Reagan is expected to sign it into law by the end of the month.

If passed, the law will establish a national film registry for movies deemed culturally or historically significant, but executives at Turner's color lab say it will have little impact on them because the law has been watered down.

Charles M. Powell, executive vice president of Color Systems Technology located in the Los Angeles suburb, is currently working on converting 90 vintage films to color. Color Systems first introduced the new color process in 1985 by releasing "Miracle on 34th Street."

Powell said of the proposed law: "It means absolutely nothing. All it means is that the government has wedged itself into the arts, and that's ridiculous."

One provision of the law states that anyone who color enhances a film in the registry would be prohibited from showing the film under its original title. But this provision was eliminated.

"For those films," said Powell "We must put a crawl (notice) at the beginning stating that the film was altered without original filmmakers' consent."

"Tucker" is the story of a car manufacturer, Preston Tucker, who opened the door to the future by building the Tucker Torpedo, a revolutionary car.

Reeling by Rick Moody

Tucker's second viewing confirmed "Tucker" is place as one of the best films of the year — a quite unexpected pronouncement since we were convinced in advance that it would be a dull bio of a car manufacturer.

The surprise is that "Tucker" turns out to be a highly engrossing American saga about one man attempting to manufacture his dream. As such, it is similar in tone and subject matter to Coppola's "Peggy Sue Got Married" — both dealing with larger-than-life protagonists who must learn to deal with dreams unexpectedly realized.

The difference is that rather than depending on the sheer enchanting verve of Kathleen Turner to carry the piece, director Coppola asserts himself in a display of audacious stylization absent from his recent efforts.

The ever likable Jeff Bridges plays Preston Tucker as an energetic, smiling showman whose self-confidence allowed him to advertise his revolutionary car of the future before he'd even produced the prototype. The ensuing struggles to build a car and company and image and fight the "big three" Detroit rivals to no avail is quite interesting, enhanced by Coppola's flair for the theatrical, which here manifests itself in a brisk pace and the use of stage sets and lighting to convey transitions. Coppola also pays homage to Orson Welles in his employment of the newsreel introduction and omniscient camera angles reminiscent of "Citizen Kane." Intriguing and novel, though some may call it artsy rather than artistic.

Stealing Home Since we are charmed, but not disarmed, by Mark Harmon, or by the tough, truck-driver appeal of the adult Jodie Foster, we carefully avoided "Stealing Home" for a long while. However, once having viewed the film, in retrospect we found Jodie to be softer, and one of the more likable elements of this mawkish attempt at a reminiscence of love.

"Home" offers Harmon as a drunken has-been of a ball player who is summoned back to his New England homestead by a wasted and surprisingly aged Blair Brown.

The reason is Jodie's death. Anyway, en route Harmon is given to much reverie dealing more with his truly beautiful relationship with his father (John Shea), and with his less appealing sex-capades with another childhood pal, than liaisons with former baby sitter and first love Jodie.

As a result the lost love focus is somewhat eclipsed by the more haunting effects of a lost father, though this is short-lived, since any accumulated audience empathy is dashed when collective grief (i.e., lost girl, lost dad, lost career) sends Harmon on a drawn-out concluding spree of unabashed and unredeemed silliness.

Cougars open home season tonight; Texas looks to avenge last year's loss

By TOM E. NORMAN
Universe Staff Writer
and Associated Press

After falling to conference rival Wyoming last week, the BYU Cougars go up against an untested Texas team tonight at Cougar Stadium.

The game is a rematch between the two teams, the Cougars having won in Austin, Texas last season. The Longhorns took an 0-1 record into last year's game, the first-ever matchup of the two schools, and BYU prevailed 22-17, thanks to eight Texas turnovers.

Turnovers will likely be the big issue again tonight as seven BYU giveaways cost the Cougars a 24-14 decision last week.

The Cougars will not have to deal with Texas' Heisman Trophy candidate Eric Metcalf. The NCAA declared Metcalf ineligible for tonight's game because he accepted money from the University of Texas athletic department to pay for summer school. Metcalf did not attend school and repaid the money, but accepting money and not attending school violates NCAA rules.

"It was a minor mistake and the money was paid back to the university out of his own pocket," said University of Texas athletic director DeLoss Dodds. "Still, it is a violation. We turn in all violations to the NCAA and will continue to do so."

Texas Head Coach David McWilliams said Metcalf's absence will likely hurt his quest for the Heisman Trophy. "I hope they won't use that against him, but I am not going to sit here and say it doesn't hurt because it does." The game will be televised live on ESPN and Metcalf was expected to do well against the Cougars' defense.

The Longhorns are four point favorites coming into tonight's game, and are ranked 19th in the Associated Press football poll. Texas showed drastic improvement after falling to BYU last year. The Longhorns beat Pittsburgh in the Bluebonnet Bowl 32-27, the same team that handed BYU a 27-17 loss in last season's opener.

If BYU is to win tonight, it will have to get its offense and kicking game back on track. Against Wyoming, BYU had four interceptions, three lost fumbles and three missed field goals.

BYU Head Coach LaVell Edwards said he "was disappointed and surprised at our performance in the season opener. We had expected more. The slow start did not bother me, because we have started slowly before, but at the time we couldn't get anything going." He felt the same about the kicking game. "It is one of the strong points on this year's team. We missed three ... field goals that could have helped us towards the end."

Cougar punter Pat Thompson managed to tally a 50.2 yard punting average in last week's game. Sean Covey, who suffered a mild concussion in the last game, will start as quarterback against Texas. Coaches are disturbed by the injury because it is the third time in four games that Covey has suffered a concussion.

The game is scheduled to begin at 6 p.m. and tickets are still available.

Former tennis coach is honored

By SUZANNE GIBBS
Asst. Sports Editor

Former BYU men's tennis coach Larry Hall was one of 15 honored at the U.S. Open this week for contributions to tennis in their communities.

Hall was awarded the 1988 Volvo

Tennis/Coaches Community Service Award for his efforts in promoting high school tennis in Utah and for his service as BYU's men's tennis coach.

After being dropped in 1980, the state tournament is back because of his efforts. He also organized a tennis clinic for area high school athletes.

When Hall retired from coaching at the end of the 1988 season, he ended his BYU career with a 135-99 career record.

His last team finished the year with a 26-6 mark and a no. 25 spot in the final 1988 Volvo Tennis/Collegiate rankings.

Garrison upsets Navratilova at Open after 21 losses to former champion

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Zina Garrison, winless in 21 previous matches against Martina Navratilova, ended her bid for a third straight U.S. Open title Wednesday with a 6-4, 6-7 (5), 7-5 victory in the quarterfinals.

Earlier, top-seeded Steffi Graf breezed into the semifinals while Chris Evert, Gabriela Sabatini and Mats Wilander rallied for come-from-behind victories.

Garrison, the 11th seed, blew five match points in the second set before eliminating Navratilova, the second seed who failed to reach the semifinals for the first time since 1982.

Garrison, a 24-year-old from Houston, advanced to the semifinals for the first time.

She appeared to have the match in hand when she raced to a 5-0 lead in the second set. But Navratilova pulled even by winning the next five games — staving off three match points before breaking Garrison's service in the third game.

Both players held serve before Navratilova easily took the tiebreaker.

The two held serve for the first four games of the final set before Garrison broke on a backhand return to take a 1-0 lead.

Navratilova broke in the 10th game when Garrison netted a backhand half-volley, but Garrison broke back with a cross-court forehand to go ahead 6-5.

Navratilova staved off a fifth match point before Garrison ended the 2-hour, 33-minute match with a forehand volley.

Graf won her 33rd straight match and moved to within two victories of completing a Grand Slam with a 6-3, 6-0 victory over No. 14 Katerina Maleeva of Bulgaria.

Maleeva's older sister, sixth-seeded Manuela, lost a two-hour baseline duel to Evert 3-6, 6-4, 6-2, while Wilander beat Emilio Sanchez of Spain 3-6, 7-6 (8-6), 6-0, 6-4.

Sabatini, the fifth seed, beat 16th-seeded Larisa Savchenko of the Soviet Union 4-6, 6-4, 6-1.

Evert, seeded third, was down a set and a break before rallying to reach the semifinals for the 17th time in 18 years.

Wilander, the No. 2 men's seed, turned his match around by winning the second-set tiebreaker. Sanchez had a set point at 6-5, but he made three straight ground-stroke errors that allowed Wilander to even the match.

After breaking Sabatini in the opening game of the second set, Savchenko appeared on the verge of an upset. But Savchenko played a nervous eighth game, double-faulting twice as Sabatini broke to even the set at 4-4.

Savchenko, who double faulted 13 times, won only one game the rest of the match.

Accident alleged as suicide

Sources say Givens ignores Tyson

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Mike Tyson's alleged suicide attempt, considered pure fiction by those closest to him, may have been an attempt to attract more attention from a wife who is ignoring him, sources close to the heavyweight champion said.

Tyson's manager, Bill Cayton, meanwhile, confirmed on Wednesday that the fighter's actress wife, Robin Givens, and her mother have urged Tyson to see a Manhattan psychiatrist described as an expert on athletic stress.

Cayton, however, said he hasn't talked to Tyson for nearly two weeks. He said he was prevented from visiting Tyson in the hospital by Givens, her mother Ruth Roper and Tyson's new publicity agent, Howard Rubenstein.

It was apparent that while Tyson was recovering from a concussion sustained last Sunday when his car ran into a tree, a rift between the Givens group and the boxing group that includes Cayton and trainer Kevin Rooney was widening.

"Without me, there'd be no Mike Tyson," Cayton said. "And suddenly, these people are interested in his welfare, and I'm not. I am outraged."

The New York Daily News on Wednesday quoted unnamed sources close to Tyson as saying the heavyweight champ told his wife he was going to kill himself, then got into his car and ran it purposely into a tree in Catskill, N.Y., where he trains. Doctors said Tyson sustained a concussion and amnesia and was unconscious for about a half hour.

Tyson originally was taken to a local hospital, then transferred to Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center in New York City, where he remained on Wednesday.

The Daily News story also accused

Cayton and Rooney of being more concerned that an Oct. 22 title defense against Frank Bruno was postponed indefinitely than they were about Tyson's health. Givens, Roper, Rubenstein and Tyson's two lawyers, Peter Parcher and Steven Hayes, were described as those truly concerned with the fighter's welfare.

Teachers needed for off-highway driver program

By GILBERT E. FISHER
Universe Staff Writer

The Utah Division of Parks and Recreation is seeking instructors for a new program to train off-highway vehicle operators who do not have a valid driver's license.

A Utah law passed in 1987, which went into effect in July, requires all off-highway vehicle operators on public lands or roads to have a valid motor vehicle drivers license or an off-highway Vehicle Education Certificate, said Mary Chavez, an off-highway vehicle training technician.

The certificate makes it possible for off-road vehicle operators over the age of 8 to operate a vehicle on lands designated for public recreation without a motor vehicle license and without parental supervision as was required before the law, said Chavez. Volunteer instructors will be primarily teaching students ages 8-15.

According to Chavez, the division is short of volunteers in Utah County and currently doesn't have a facility where classes can be taught locally.

The division would like to find a place where classes could be taught in close proximity to a training range and hopes people volunteer the use of their land for classes, Chavez said.

Anyone interested in volunteering to teach or allowing the use of their land for a range, and those who wish to sign up for the class, should contact off-highway vehicle training specialist Larry Mullins at 373-2216.

Volunteer instructors must be at least 18 years of age, have a valid drivers license (not necessarily from Utah) and have no convictions for driving under the influence of alcohol during the last five years.

All qualified volunteer instructors will be trained by the division prior to teaching, Chavez said. "They will be taught how to keep their students' attention in the classroom," said Chavez. "And how to spot specific problems and how to correct them."

The training should last two to three days for those who will teach snowmobile or motorcycle operation and four to five days for ATV instructors, Chavez said.

The classes that the volunteers will teach should include 10-12 hours of instruction, both in the classroom and out on the range. Students will be charged a $10 fee for the class and can be certified to operate any one or all three of the off-road vehicle classifications (snowmobiles, ATV's or off-highway motorcycles), said Chavez.

"The students will be taught safety items, rules of the road and Utah laws," Chavez said. The course will include a written test that they must score 70 percent or better on and several "hands on" maneuvers on the test range that they must pass off in order to get their certificate, she said.

Safety Fair planned

By MICHELLE F. CLAWSON
Universe Staff Writer

Orem Community Hospital will be offering a free Children's Safety Fair Saturday, Sept. 10, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. on the north lawn of the hospital at 331 N. 400 West.

It is a good time for safety education for the children returning to school and their parents, said Daron Cowley, hospital public relations coordinator.

According to Cowley, out of the 12,000 cases reported to the hospital's emergency room each year, 50 percent are children age 12 and under. That averages out to about 500 children per month, which is the main reason the hospital feels it is important to increase awareness in children's safety. Increasing safety awareness may reduce the number of kids seen in the emergency room, said Cowley.

We wanted to help educate young community families on how to be safe and improve their well-being, said Larry Layne, emergency room manager at the hospital.

"We've got a large portion of the fair directed to parents so they can help their children be safe," said Layne. "We want this safety fair not only to be interesting but beneficial to all ages."

According to Cowley, 30 different activities have been planned for the fair including a Utah Valley safety officers bicycle safety demonstration and demonstrations by experts on trampoline safety. Other programs include water safety, babysitting, first aid and home safety, hospital tours of the emergency and operating rooms, and "Andy Ambulance," the robot that teaches children a variety of safety tips.

One of the highlights of the fair will be a "First Aid Trail," where children can follow a path learning about emergency first aid, said Cowley. "Our emphasis here is to teach children how to handle different types of first aid emergencies," said Cowley. Instruction will include treatment for cuts, insect and snake bites, poisonings, burns, fractures and other common injuries.

"We will also be offering a 64-page emergency handbook at the end of the trail that the entire family can use," said Cowley.

The Orem City Police Department will present information on the Neighborhood Watch Program, home security, and bicycle and pedestrian safety. We will offer safety education in the form of movies and puppet shows to help keep children entertained, said Gary Guymon, public relations crime prevention officer.

Guymon, who also plays the part of "Officer Friendly" in the Orem community, will be at the fair to reinforce in the minds of children the importance of safety rules. "Most children are pretty well educated on safety rules but still seem to ignore what they know is safe," said Guymon.

Bloodtyping of children will be another service offered. A special card will be made identifying the child's fingerprints and blood type. According to Cowley, this activity is of extreme value if ever a child is lost or abducted.

In addition, cloth identification cards will be offered displaying the child's name, address and phone number. The tag also names the child's physician and gives permission for emergency medical treatment, said Cowley. These cards are easily sewn into clothes or attached to the child's shoe laces, Cowley said.

The fair is free, aside from a 25-cent charge for hot dogs and drinks. Layne estimates that 3,000 parents and children will attend the fair.

Fire begins near Ogden

By PAT BIRKEDAHL
Universe Staff Writer

Just as several northern Utah wildfires were coming under control Wednesday, a new one came to life near Ogden.

Firefighting crews had been successfully battling the wildfires that have consumed nearly 8000 acres in Northern Utah.

Sixty firefighters transferred from the Affleck Fire in Emigration Canyon near Salt Lake City to fight the new fire, the Mount Ogden Fire in Taylor's Canyon near Ogden.

The Mount Ogden Fire began at 3:30 p.m. Wednesday. Cornelle Christensen, a supervisor of the Fishlake National Forest on temporary assignment for fire duty, said crews from Ogden, Weber County and other municipalities began the fight before the crews arrived from the Affleck Fire.

The Affleck Fire was contained by late Wednesday. The Mount Ogden Fire is expected to be controlled by Friday at 6 p.m.

Crews have been released from the site of the fire near Alpine, the Fort Canyon Fire. The Pleasant Grove Ranger Distict continues to monitor the area.

The Wallsburg Ridge Fire near Deer Creek Reservoir was contained Tuesday and was expected to be controlled Wednesday evening.

The cause of the Mount Ogden Fire is not known at this time, forestry officials said.

The other wildfires that have burned for several days in Northern Utah were all man-made. The Wallsburg Ridge Fire was caused by a broken power line. The Fort Canyon Fire near Alpine was the result of an illegal campfire.

The Forest Service posted signs warning extreme fire danger as early as April.

Drought conditions worsened through the summer, increasing the threat of fire.

As a result of the dry conditions, the Forest Service has strict regulations for the prevention of forest fires.

Loyal Clark, information officer for the Uinta National Forest, said, "Right now we have a fire closure on the entire forest. That means that no campfires are allowed outside of developed campgrounds, no smoking except in boats and in enclosed cars on paved roads, and no fireworks."
